Hello and welcome! May your hearts be glad and your spirits be light. For everything there is a season and a time for every purpose under Heaven. Now is the time for a wedding. Bride and Groom have asked you all here today to bear witness to the forming of their covenant. In honor of this event, they will say heartfelt words, perform age-old rituals and validate this event in your presence, their family, and friends. They will laugh and cry, dance and sing, and above all, celebrate their love with the blessings of the people who matter most to them. To this day Bride and Groom bring the joy in their hearts as a gift to one another. They bring their shared dreams, which tie them together. And they bring the seeds for their future, out of which will grow their life together. You have been invited to share in their joy because of your bonds to the bride and groom and their families. Again, they welcome you and thank you for coming.
